

Number of submissions still rising

The editors appreciate the constantly expanding number of manuscripts submitted to Oral Health and Preventive Dentistry. In the past we have received manuscripts from the academic communities in no less than 37 countries. The efforts by authors and referees to constantly improve the journal in a constructive dialogue are admirable, as is the effective work done by the editorial office to limit the production time. Although the amount of manuscripts is overwhelming we shall do our best to keep this period short, although an increase appears to be unavoidable.
